We value the subscribers to our journals and our relationships with our subscribers. Unfortunately, The MIT Press like many other journal publishers has occasionally been the victim of fraud, to its detriment and that of all honest subscribers. So there may be no doubt as to the proper use of MIT Press subscriptions, we must ask that you agree to the following, which will apply to every subscription that you may make to a journal published by The MIT Press while these Terms and Conditions remain in effect.

Your placement of a subscription order constitutes your acceptance of these Terms and Conditions as a binding agreement between you and The MIT Press. References to “you” and “your” in these Terms and Conditions include the named subscriber (personal or institutional) and such subscriber’s agents, owners, employees, and officers, and all heirs, personal representatives, successors and assigns to any of the above. The terms “institution” and “institutional” include not only academic institutions but also corporations, government agencies, non-profit organizations, and other non-individual subscribers. “Individual,” when referring to a subscription, includes any non-institutional subscription whether identified as “individual,” “member,” “student,” “retired,” or otherwise.

Please note: the following are in addition to the Terms of Use that you will need to accept when you access your subscription online.

1. Any individual subscription must not be for the use of any institution. Without limitation, use by an institution includes systematic redistribution to fellow employees or other persons affiliated with any institution with which you are affiliated, or systematic placing in such entity’s library, intranet, or other central repository.
2. Any institutional subscription must be for the sole use of the institution identified in the subscription order, and not for any other institution, unless The MIT Press otherwise expressly agrees in writing.
3. Without limitation of the foregoing, it is a violation of these terms and conditions to do any of the following:
 - (A) Resell or otherwise transfer a subscription (for payment or not for payment) or the issues related thereto to anyone other than the named subscriber without prior notice to The MIT Press and written acceptance by The MIT Press of the transfer.
 - (B) Order an subscription at the individual rate when the real intended use is institutional. Institutional use includes, without limitation, systematic redistribution to your fellow employees, or systematic placing in your employer’s library, intranet, or other central repository.
 - (C) Allow anyone other than you to use your IP addresses, user names, passwords, or other access control mechanisms, to gain access to a journal to which you have subscribed.
 - (D) Distribute any discounted copies, such as discounted print copies, to any entity other than the subscriber in whose name they have been ordered.
 - (E) Claim a “missing” or “damaged” copy other than to replace a copy that failed to reach you or reached you in damaged condition.
4. Any subscription taken out at the individual rate but not for the actual use of the named subscriber will be conclusively deemed to have been resold to an institution at the full institutional rate.
5. Nothing in this Agreement is intended to prevent bona fide and ad hoc lending (such as inter-library loan between institutions) of particular issues of a journal. Rather, this Agreement is intended to prevent systematic substitution of an institution for the named subscriber.
6. You agree that in the event The MIT Press in good faith determines that you have breached this Agreement, it may terminate or suspend the subscription(s) concerned, and apply the amount of any fee(s) attributable to remaining issues to its damages.
7. You agree that any copies obtained in violation of Paragraph 3 are not subject to the “first sale” provisions of Section 109(a) of the U.S. Copyright Act, and that any violation of Paragraph 3 is an infringement of copyright for which you are liable as a direct or contributory infringer. You agree to pay statutory damages equal to three times the full price that each institution having improper access to the journal should have paid, and the price actually paid (the “price differential”). If for any reason a court should determine that such violation is not an infringement of copyright you agree that it is a violation of Chapter 93A of the Massachusetts General laws, and that The MIT Press is entitled to damages equal to three times the price differential.
8. In any action brought to enforce this Agreement, you agree to pay all reasonable attorneys’ fees incurred by The MIT Press.
9. This Agreement is deemed to be entered into and performed wholly in Massachusetts, and will be governed by the domestic laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the copyright and other applicable laws of the United States.
10. No action or failure to act by The MIT Press will be deemed an amendment, or a waiver in any instance, of any of the foregoing unless specifically so identified by The MIT Press in writing.
11. This Agreement will inure to the benefit of any successor or assignee of the MIT Press as a whole or with respect to its rights in any journal.

Your placement of any subscription order constitutes your acceptance of the following terms and conditions as a binding agreement between you and The MIT Press.

1 Definitions

“You” and “your” in this Agreement include the subscription agent placing the order, the agent’s employees, the owners and officers of any corporate or other entity acting as an agent, and the successors, assigns, heirs and personal representatives of all such persons.

“We,” “us” and “our” refer to The MIT Press and its successors and assigns.

“Institution” and “institutional” include not only academic institutions but also corporations, government agencies, non-profit organizations, and other non-individual subscribers.

“Individual” means any subscriber that is not an institution, and the rate(s) available to such subscribers, whether identified as “individual,” “member,” “student,” “retired,” or otherwise.

2 Institutional Subscription Fees

Institutional subscriptions must be ordered at the institutional rate. No institutional subscription will be accepted at any other price unless explicitly approved by us in writing.

3 Limitation to Named Subscriber only

You will not order any subscription, or order or request a copy of any issue, except for the sole use of the subscriber identified in your order or request. If your customer is a consortium of institutions, then the terms “institution” and “subscriber” as used in this Agreement include each of the participating entities provided that you have fully disclosed each of them to us and we have specifically agreed in writing to the arrangement. (Routine processing of an order does not constitute agreement to a consortial arrangement; only an email or letter from us expressly acknowledging the identities of the participating institutions will satisfy this paragraph.)

4 Abusive Practices Prohibited

In order to prevent abuse of MIT Press subscriptions, and without in any way limiting any of the foregoing, you agree that you will not:

- (A) Order any subscription in the name of an individual when your customer, the ultimate recipient of the subscription, is an institution.
- (B) Order any subscription in the name of an individual that is in fact intended for institutional use. Institutional use includes, without limitation, systematic redistribution to fellow employees of the named subscriber, or systematic placing in his or her employer’s library, intranet, or other central repository.
- (C) Order any subscription under an assumed name, or otherwise without disclosing your role in the transaction.
- (D) Resell or otherwise transfer to any institution any subscription (or the issues related thereto) obtained at the individual rate.
- (E) Order any subscription at any rate other than the institutional rate. As stated in the price list, all agency orders for individual subscriptions must be at the institutional rate.
- (F) Use or allow anyone else to use any IP address, user name, password, or other access control mechanism that has been identified to us as attributable to a particular subscriber, other than for such subscriber. The only exception to this is you may on a trial basis, with full disclosure to us, act as administrator for a potential consortial client and allow the members of the potential consortium to access our content through an IP address, user name, and/or password belonging to you.
- (G) Distribute any discounted copies, such as discounted print copies, to any institution other than the customer in whose name it has been ordered.
- (H) Order discounted copies under the account of one customer for another customer.
- (I) Claim “missing” or “damaged” copies on the account of one customer, and provide them to another customer.
- (J) Photocopy or otherwise reproduce in print, digital, or other form, any issue of any journal, or distribute copies unlawfully

5 No Past Improper Conduct

You represent that to prior to accepting these terms and conditions you have not engaged in any conduct that would have violated these Terms and Conditions had they been in effect at the applicable time. If this representation is not correct, you will promptly disclose all facts related to your prior conduct and enter into settlement negotiations with us in good faith.

6 Damages

You agree that any copies obtained in violation of this Agreement are not subject to the “first sale” provisions of Section 109(a) of the U.S. Copyright Act, and that any violation of this Agreement is an infringement of copyright for which you are liable as a direct or contributory infringer. You agree to pay statutory damages equal to three times the difference between the full price that each institution having improper access to the journal should have paid, and the price actually paid (the “price differential”). If for any reason a court should determine that such violation is not an infringement of copyright you agree that it is a violation of Chapter 93A of the Massachusetts General laws, and that we are entitled to damages equal to three times the price differential.

7 Actions in the Event of Breach

In the event that we in good faith determine there has been a violation of this Agreement, we may take any or all of the following actions, without limitation of our rights at law or in equity:

- Suspend or terminate the subscription(s) involved in the violation, and retain any portion of the fee(s) attributable to remaining issues in partial satisfaction of our damages.
- Share information concerning the circumstances, including your name(s), with other publishers, who may take similar action on the basis of this information.
- Share information concerning the circumstances with your customers and potential customers.

In any action brought to enforce this Agreement, you agree to pay our reasonable attorneys' fees.

8 Right to Accept or Reject Business

We reserve the right in our sole discretion to accept or reject business from any subscription agent. You acknowledge that any suspected breach of this Agreement may result in immediate suspension of your business with us.

9 Indemnification

In the event that any subscriber brings claims against us based on any failure by you to perform your duties as its subscription agent, or based upon any suspension or termination of a subscription pursuant to the above terms, you will indemnify us against all liability or loss, including reasonable attorneys' fees, arising out of or sustained in connection with such claims.

10 Miscellaneous

This Agreement is deemed to be entered into and performed wholly in Massachusetts, and will be governed by the domestic laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the copyright and other applicable laws of the United States. No action or failure to act by The MIT Press will be deemed an amendment, or a waiver in any instance, of any of the foregoing unless specifically so identified by us in writing.
