Please note MIT does not charge for incoming wires. The bank you use to remit a wire transfer payment will make the transfer according to its own routing arrangements. If your bank has chosen to use an intermediary bank to transfer the payment to MIT, the intermediary bank may deduct their fee from your payment. This appears to be general banking practice. Please ask your bank if they will use an intermediary bank to process the transfer and if this bank will charge you or the receiving bank (MIT's bank) a fee and what the amount will be. The customer is responsible for all bank fees.

Terms and Conditions for Subscribers and Users of MIT Press Journals

These Terms and Conditions apply to all subscribers to MIT Press journals, and all users of MIT Press journals, with the following exceptions:

- The provisions of Section I do not apply to universities or other institutions that have entered into written agreements with The MIT Press.
- In the event of any inconsistency between any provision in these Terms and Conditions and the specific terms of such a written agreement, the latter will control.
- For use of Open Access content, please see Section III below.

Subscription to, or use of, an MIT Press journal constitutes acceptance of these terms and conditions and creates an agreement between you and The MIT Press. References to “you” and “your” in these Terms and Conditions include the named subscriber (personal or institutional), such subscriber’s agents, owners, employees, and officers, and/or each individual journal user, as applicable. The terms “institution” and “institutional” include not only academic institutions but also corporations, government agencies, non-profit organizations, and other non-individual subscribers. “Individual,” when referring to a subscription, includes any non-institutional subscription whether identified as “individual,” “member,” “student,” “retired,” or otherwise.

I. Subscription Terms and Conditions:

We value the subscribers to our journals and our relationships with our subscribers. Unfortunately, The MIT Press like many other journal publishers has occasionally been the victim of fraud, to its detriment and that of all honest subscribers.

An individual subscription must not be for the use of any institution. Without limitation, use by an institution includes systematic redistribution to fellow employees or other persons affiliated with any institution with which you are affiliated, or systematic placing in such entity’s library, intranet, or other central repository.

1. Any institutional subscription must be for the sole use of the institution identified in the subscription order, and not for any other institution, unless The MIT Press otherwise expressly agrees in writing.
2. Without limitation of the foregoing, it is a violation of these terms and conditions to do any of the following:
  - a. Resell or otherwise transfer a subscription (for payment or not for payment) or the issues related thereto to anyone other than the named subscriber without prior notice to The MIT Press and written acceptance by The MIT Press of the transfer.
  - b. Order a subscription at the individual rate when the real intended use is institutional. Institutional use includes, without limitation, systematic redistribution to your fellow employees, or systematic placing in your employer’s library, intranet, or other central repository.
  - c. Allow anyone other than you to use your IP addresses, user names, passwords, or other access control mechanisms, to gain access to a journal to which you have subscribed.
  - d. Distribute any discounted copies, such as discounted print copies, to any entity other than the subscriber in whose name they have been ordered.
  - e. Claim a “missing” or “damaged” copy other than to replace a copy that failed to reach you or reached you in damaged condition.
3. Any subscription taken out at the individual rate but not for the actual use of the named subscriber will be conclusively deemed to have been resold to an institution at the full institutional rate.

Terms and Conditions for Subscribers and Users of MIT Press Journals (continued)

4. Nothing in these Terms and Conditions is intended to prevent bona fide and ad hoc lending of particular issues of a journal. Rather, the intent is to prevent systematic substitution of an institution for the named subscriber.
5. You agree that in the event The MIT Press in good faith determines that you have breached these Terms and Conditions, it may terminate or suspend the subscription(s) concerned, and apply the amount of any fee(s) attributable to remaining issues to its damages.
6. You agree that any copies obtained in violation of Paragraph 3 are not subject to the “first sale” provisions of Section 109(a) of the U.S. Copyright Act, and that any violation of Paragraph 3 is an infringement of copyright for which you are liable as a direct or contributory infringer. You agree to pay statutory damages equal to three times the full price that each institution having improper access to the journal should have paid, and the price actually paid (the “price differential”). If for any reason a court should determine that such violation is not an infringement of copyright you agree that it is a violation of Chapter 93A of the Massachusetts General laws, and that The MIT Press is entitled to damages equal to three times the price differential.
7. In any action brought to enforce this Agreement, you agree to pay all reasonable attorneys’ fees incurred by The MIT Press.

II. Permitted Uses:

This Section II applies to all individuals who use MIT Press journals. This includes not only individual subscribers but also all Authorized Users affiliated with any subscriber that is not an individual.

An “Authorized User” in the case of a company or government agency means any employee who has been provided password-protected access to an MIT Press journal. An “Authorized User” in the case of a university or similar institution means any employee, faculty member, staff member, or student (including distance learners) of the subscribing Institution, and other persons affiliated with the institution (e.g., alumni or retirees) who have general Internet access through the campus network or via a secure proxy server. Patrons of such an institution's library facilities who are not described above are Authorized Users only if physically present at such facilities and subject to the supervision of the institution.

An Authorized User may make the following uses of the Journals:

- Download individual articles from any Journal for personal use, and archive them on his/her own personal computer. The purpose of this is to enable research-driven, as-needed downloading. This means (among other things) that bulk downloading is expressly forbidden, as is serial or cumulative downloading that results in the user reproducing on his or her computer, in effect, all or any substantial subset of any issue of any Journal.
- Print out individual articles from any Journal for personal use. As above, bulk printing and serial printing that results in the user reproducing all or any substantial part of any Journal issue are not allowed.
- Make copies of journal articles available via Interlibrary Loan (ILL), in compliance with Section 108 of the Copyright Act and the CONTU guidelines.
- Make one copy of any Journal article by email, hard copy, or fax to one person at another location for that individual's personal use as above. This means (among other things) that bulk forwarding is expressly forbidden, as is serial or cumulative forwarding that results in a third person’s reproducing on his or her computer, in effect, all or any substantial subset of any issue of any Journal.
- Make traditional scholarly re-use of material within the bounds of fair use.

Terms and Conditions for Subscribers and Users of MIT Press Journals (continued)

- Place copies of limited excerpts – not to exceed, except in unusual circumstances, a single article from any given Journal issue – in “e-reserves”, “e-course packs” or “Course Management Systems (CMS)” such as Blackboard for the use of students in a particular course on a password-protected basis, provided that any material placed in e-reserves, e-course packs, or CMS will be deleted at the conclusion of the course to which it relates. For the avoidance of doubt: material may be maintained in e-reserves, e-course packs, or CMS courses until the end of such course even if this license shall have terminated sooner.
- All other uses are prohibited

III. Open Access and Free Materials:

The MIT Press journals division has a long-standing commitment to open access content and makes hundreds of articles freely accessible on its website mitpressjournals.org. Articles included in MIT Press OA journals are rigorously reviewed and allow immediate access upon publication. MITPJ open access articles are normally published under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License <<https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0/>> (CC BY 4.0) although some are published under a Creative Commons Attribution 3.0 International License <<https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/3.0/>> (CC BY 3.0). Articles posted under either a CC BY 3.0 or 4.0 license allow users to share, copy, and redistribute the material in any medium of format, and adapt, remix, transform, and build upon the material for any purpose, even commercially. Reusing under a CC BY license requires that appropriate attribution to the source of the material must be included along with a link to the CC BY license, with any changes made to the original material indicated.

Articles marked as Free may be accessed online by any user of the MIT Press site, limited by the terms and conditions as outlined above under paragraphs I and II.

IV. Other Terms and Conditions:

The agreement created hereunder is deemed to be entered into and performed wholly in Massachusetts, and will be governed by the domestic laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the copyright and other applicable laws of the United States. No purported assignment by you of such agreement, or of your subscription agreement, will be valid unless permitted in writing in advance by The MIT Press.

No action or failure to act by The MIT Press will be deemed an amendment, or a waiver in any instance, of any of the foregoing unless specifically so identified by The MIT Press in writing. The agreement created by your use or subscription will be binding on you and your successors, your permitted assignees, and your heirs and personal representatives, and inures to the benefit of any successor or assignee of the MIT Press as a whole or with respect to its rights in any journal.

Additional MIT Press Terms of Use, found at <<http://mitpress.mit.edu/terms-use>>, are incorporated herein by reference and made a part of these Terms and Conditions. For purposes of these Terms and Conditions, the term “User” in those Terms of Use means any Authorized User.

Terms and Conditions for Subscription Agents

Your placement of any subscription order constitutes your acceptance of the following terms and conditions as a binding agreement between you and The MIT Press.

1 Definitions

“You” and “your” in this Agreement include the subscription agent placing the order, the agent’s employees, the owners and officers of any corporate or other entity acting as an agent, and the successors, assigns, heirs and personal representatives of all such persons. “We,” “us” and “our” refer to The MIT Press and its successors and assigns. “Institution” and “institutional” include not only academic institutions but also corporations, government agencies, non-profit organizations, and other non-individual subscribers. “Individual” means any subscriber that is not an institution, and the rate(s) available to such subscribers, whether identified as “individual,” “member,” “student,” “retired,” or otherwise.

Terms and Conditions for Subscription Agents (continued)*2 Institutional Subscription Fees

Institutional subscriptions must be ordered at the institutional rate. No institutional subscription will be accepted at any other price unless explicitly approved by us in writing.

3 Limitation to Named Subscriber only

You will not order any subscription, or order or request a copy of any issue, except for the sole use of the subscriber identified in your order or request. If your customer is a consortium of institutions, then the terms “institution” and “subscriber” as used in this Agreement include each of the participating entities provided that you have fully disclosed each of them to us and we have specifically agreed in writing to the arrangement. (Routine processing of an order does not constitute agreement to a consortial arrangement; only an email or letter from us expressly acknowledging the identities of the participating institutions will satisfy this paragraph.)

4 Abusive Practices Prohibited

In order to prevent abuse of MIT Press subscriptions, and without in any way limiting any of the foregoing, you agree that you will not:

- (A) Order any subscription in the name of an individual when your customer, the ultimate recipient of the subscription, is an institution.
- (B) Order any subscription in the name of an individual that is in fact intended for institutional use. Institutional use includes, without limitation, systematic redistribution to fellow employees of the named subscriber, or systematic placing in his or her employer’s library, intranet, or other central repository.
- (C) Order any subscription under an assumed name, or otherwise without disclosing your role in the transaction.
- (D) Resell or otherwise transfer to any institution any subscription (or the issues related thereto) obtained at the individual rate.
- (E) Order any subscription at any rate other than the institutional rate. As stated in the price list, all agency orders for individual subscriptions must be at the institutional rate.
- (F) Use or allow anyone else to use any IP address, user name, password, or other access control mechanism that has been identified to us as attributable to a particular subscriber, other than for such subscriber. The only exception to this is you may on a trial basis, with full disclosure to us, act as administrator for a potential consortial client and allow the members of the potential consortium to access our content through an IP address, user name, and/or password belonging to you.
- (G) Distribute any discounted copies, such as discounted print copies, to any institution other than the customer in whose name it has been ordered.
- (H) Order discounted copies under the account of one customer for another customer.
- (I) Claim “missing” or “damaged” copies on the account of one customer, and provide them to another customer.
- (J) Photocopy or otherwise reproduce in print, digital, or other form, any issue of any journal, or distribute copies unlawfully reproduced in any form by others.

5 No Past Improper Conduct

You represent that to prior to accepting these terms and conditions you have not engaged in any conduct that would have violated these Terms and Conditions had they been in effect at the applicable time. If this representation is not correct, you will promptly disclose all facts related to your prior conduct and enter into settlement negotiations with us in good faith.

Terms and Conditions for Subscription Agents (continued)*6 Damages

You agree that any copies obtained in violation of this Agreement are not subject to the “first sale” provisions of Section 109(a) of the U.S. Copyright Act, and that any violation of this Agreement is an infringement of copyright for which you are liable as a direct or contributory infringer. You agree to pay statutory damages equal to three times the difference between the full price that each institution having improper access to the journal should have paid, and the price actually paid (the “price differential”). If for any reason a court should determine that such violation is not an infringement of copyright you agree that it is a violation of Chapter 93A of the Massachusetts General laws, and that we are entitled to damages equal to three times the price differential.

7 Actions in the Event of Breach

In the event that we in good faith determine there has been a violation of this Agreement, we may take any or all of the following actions, without limitation of our rights at law or in equity:

- Suspend or terminate the subscription(s) involved in the violation, and retain any portion of the fee(s) attributable to remaining issues in partial satisfaction of our damages.
- Share information concerning the circumstances, including your name(s), with other publishers, who may take similar action on the basis of this information.
- Share information concerning the circumstances with your customers and potential customers.

In any action brought to enforce this Agreement, you agree to pay our reasonable attorneys’ fees.

8 Right to Accept or Reject Business

We reserve the right in our sole discretion to accept or reject business from any subscription agent. You acknowledge that any suspected breach of this Agreement may result in immediate suspension of your business with us.

9 Indemnification

In the event that any subscriber brings claims against us based on any failure by you to perform your duties as its subscription agent, or based upon any suspension or termination of a subscription pursuant to the above terms, you will indemnify us against all liability or loss, including reasonable attorneys’ fees, arising out of or sustained in connection with such claims.

10 Miscellaneous

This Agreement is deemed to be entered into and performed wholly in Massachusetts, and will be governed by the domestic laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the copyright and other applicable laws of the United States. No action or failure to act by The MIT Press will be deemed an amendment, or a waiver in any instance, of any of the foregoing unless specifically so identified by us in writing.
